The King's Relations With The Dominions Since They Acquired Equality of Status

(By Sir Shashan Bodden in the London Spectator)

ONCE the Dominion acquired equality of status with the United Kingdom with one another, the position of the Sovereign in all of them is identical. His Majesty is no less King of South Africa than he is King of England. The people of Australia, New Zealand owe allegiance to the same Sovereign as the people of Canada.

The fact that the King's person is not in the Great Britain is irrelevant to the fact that His Majesty is in every country where he is acknowledged as sovereign. It is the position of the King in each of the countries in which he happens to be, that would be just as much King of England if he lived in New Zealand as he is King of England.

King performs a dual function. On the one hand, he is the Sovereign, head of each of the five states which go to make up the British Commonwealth of Nations under the Crown. He is also in respect of one of them—Great Britain—combined with the duties of the daily routine of state business, and performs such an array of duties as to his representatives in the Dominion.

The British Commonwealth of Nations has not been built up by any legal or even legislative process. It is a fact, born of the natural result of the gradual equality of status which the Dominion have won since the acquisition of a Government of their own. Great Britain and, so far as the King is concerned, to substitute for a direct interest in the day-to-day affairs of government at Westminster, a general interest in the affairs of all the five nations of the Commonwealth. But it should be remembered, also, that just as the King's absence from Great Britain creates an abnormal situation in His Majesty's absence from the Dominion, it equally creates an abnormal situation in a normal state of affairs when the King is actually present.

There appear to be two ways of making provision for the carrying out of royal functions in the absence of His Majesty's person. In Great Britain it has been customary to appoint a Governor-General to perform the duties of the King. In the Dominion, the simple and formal duties in relation to the affairs of state, which are part of the duties of the King, are performed by a Governor-General, a position which is questionable whether a Council of State would be adequate if the King were absent for more than a few days.

In the other Dominions, however, where the absence of the Sovereign creates much longer periods of absence, the Governor-General is appointed as a representative of the Sovereign. The title of Governor-General has been retained, but the functions of the Governor-General are now entirely different from what they were and no longer carry the prestige of the Governor-General of the State of Westminster in 1831. He is now a representative of the King, and it is to represent the King, that he may be thought to have imposed on him any obligation to act as an intermediary between the Sovereign and the Dominion. In fact, he represents the King. In fact, he is a representative of the King.

This position was clearly shown when the King visited the Dominion of Canada in 1929. The Governor-General did not meet him on arrival in Ottawa, but the relationship between the King and the Governor-General was a social and not an official one. These arrangements might well be reviewed in the light of present conditions. The practical, though not the theoretical, difference in the position of Great Britain and the Crown and the self-governing Dominions combined with the inequality which it creates might well justify the full equality of status.

In such circumstances, it may be thought that the King's presence in the Dominion will enable the King to bring his own personal presence more frequently than has been hitherto possible. His Majesty should be able to go to Ottawa or Canberra or Pretoria in order to visit and meet and have more opportunity to be concerned by a visit to Windsor or Bath, for instance.

The overseas Dominions of the British Commonwealth have now a new consciousness and a new sense of their importance as a factor in the world. They are sensitive to any suggestion that they are inferior in status or position to Great Britain. They are nevertheless proud of their origin and proud still in the manner of their progression from colonial dependence to fully autonomous self-government. They are proud of their loyalty and devotion to the Crown.

At the same time they recognize that, in a world of shifting alliances and unstable alliances, no artificial force can be taken for granted, and every institution, if it is to endure, must be brought into line with reality changing circumstances. They realize that the British Commonwealth is not so much an end in itself as a means to an end, and that even that institution organization, which is such an organization they are not to be prepared to give up anything of their sovereignty if every other nation did likewise, but they will never do so until they have first ascertained it to the full. And if their complete independence and independence in every detail are recognized in the position of this country, they will then suggest, in terms to the benefit of all those with whom they are associated, to whatever extent inequalities are allowed to remain, the full measure of mutual co-operation, if they be diminished.

Selling Advertising

Good Advice Offered To Those Who Will Profit By It

Some highly worthwhile advice on developing great retail advertising was given recently by Fred Bushman, a Pacific coast advertising agency executive, in a talk before the Oregon Association of Publishers. At a luncheon meeting of advertising managers, the text of which was published in the Oregon Publisher, official organ of the association.

"I don't believe, could you with profit be adopted by home-town weekly rates in this country, and it will approach to local merchants."

Essentially, Mr. Bushman believed, that the advertising of local merchants should be done on a program and a plan.

First of all, he said, "Do a good piece of work for your newspaper. Build it personally. If your paper is not doing a good piece of work, it will be a waste of money to do a good piece of work for it."

Another good advertisement he said, is one that is written in the language of the advertiser. It should be written in the language of the advertiser, and it should be written in the language of the advertiser.

GAME FISH

The National Parks Provide Good Sport For The Angler

The lakes and streams in Canada's national parks are among the finest fishing grounds in the world. The angler there will find a special interest—game fish. Many visitors come to the parks mainly because of the prospect of good sport fishing; others come fishing with some of the many forms of recreation, and relaxation which have made the parks popular with all classes of people.

Some of the parks offer a greater variety of sport fishing than others. The waters of Banff and Jasper National Parks, in Alberta, contain several species of game trout—rainbow, cutthroat, eastern brook, lake, and white. Trout and brook trout, including the brown trout, Cutthroat are common in the four national parks. In the Banff National Park, for example, in run of the trout, Kootenay, Yoho, Mount Revelstoke and another famous lake trout and Daily Vaseau are common in the waters of Yoho, while Kootenay Park offers rainbow and Daily Vaseau.

Some of the most common species in Glacier Park, and rainbow in Mount Revelstoke, Jasper and Watkins. These parks provide angling for pike, and all the necessary equipment has been provided by the Rocky Mountain Parks.

In the case of "Prairie" Park, Ontario, offers fishing for pike and the Riding Mountain is Manitoba—lake trout and brook trout. In the case of "Prairie" Park, Ontario, offers fishing for pike and the Riding Mountain is Manitoba—lake trout and brook trout.

Great Resources Of Hard Coal Said To Be Lying Almost Unused In Peace River Canon

(By David M. Nichol, Chicago Daily News Service)

ONE of the great hard coal resources of America lies almost untouched and inaccessible in the canyon of the Peace River, about 70 miles west of Fort St. John, B.C. Reports say there are some 600 million tons in the rich seams in the Peace River Canon and exposed when the rushing waters have cut deep into the ground. This is 30 times the yearly output of the entire United States.

The coal lies in the Peace River Canon, about 60 miles from the mouth of the Peace River, and is said to be one of the richest coal fields in the world. The coal is said to be one of the richest coal fields in the world. The coal is said to be one of the richest coal fields in the world.

A Great Chance

Immigrants From Europe Could Do Much With Vacant Farms

One of the most pathetic sights in Manitoba is the abandoned farms. We have many of them, monuments to something. Saskatchewan has them and there are others in Alberta. Something must be done to bring them out of this problem. Maybe the provincial governments overlook the reason, or like the people do not know the way or the desirable farms loaded with growth and woods, empty farms and dwellings. Even Ontario supposedly a better province, acknowledges eight thousand vacant farms. It would be a great revelation to all Canadians today if North America's 13 colonies or Dominions were attracted to this Dominion and take over the vacant farms. And that they would do with them would be a better lesson in agriculture than any college could give to young workers of the soil.—Brandon Star.

Coal Output

Canadian Coalitions Show An Increase In February

Canada's production produced 1,38,232 tons of coal in February, an increase of nine per cent. over the 1,26,798 tons mined in February, 1934. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports the monthly output of 1,38,232 tons had shown a seven per cent gain over the same month of 1934.

February output included 1,79,738 tons of bituminous coal, 367,413 tons of sub-bituminous coal and 17,739 tons of lignite coal. Alberta produced 81,352 tons; Nova Scotia, 459, 112 tons; Manitoba, 173,798 tons; British Columbia, 154,316 tons and New Brunswick, 13,794 tons.

Imports totalled 1,302,891 tons, compared with 175,776 in February, 1934, while exports amounted to 2,35,056 tons against 77,203.
